Christmas Greeting to the Nation December 24, 1999

The President. On this holiest of holidays, Hillary and I wish all of you a very merry Christmas. At the dawn of a new millennium, let us reflect on our hopes, our dreams, the gifts we can give to the future.

The First Lady. From our family to yours, merry Christmas, happy new year, and may God bless you all.

Radio Remarks for the “Lost Lives” Christmas Eve Broadcast December 24, 1999

3625, Maura Monaghan, from Tyrone. A Catholic girl, just 18 months old. To her family, little Maura Monaghan was known simply as “Mossie.” She was the youngest victim of the Omagh bombing. Her mother, Avril, her grandmother, Mary Grimes, and her unborn twin sisters also were killed on that Saturday afternoon, the 15th of August 1998, at 10 past 3 p.m., when that terrible bomb exploded.

They had gone to Omagh town as a special treat, to celebrate Mary Grimes’ birthday. They had even been to church earlier that day, the same church where their funeral services would be held just a few days later.

I still feel a personal connection with this tragedy. Two weeks later, Hillary and I visited Omagh. We saw the scene where 31 people were killed in the worst single incident of the Troubles. And then we went to the Leisure Center, where the families of the victims had had to wait for news of their loved ones. They were again to meet us, as were many victims who had been terribly injured on that day.

That meeting was one of the most difficult and moving experiences of our lives. But I have to say, it was also one of the most uplifting. Again and again, people who had been injured or lost loved ones said, “Keep going with the peace process. Keep going, and don’t give up on it. Do whatever you can to make sure that nobody else suffers as we are suffering.”

I know they suffer still. I know the first dawn of the new millennium will be a sad time for those who remember the family and friends who should still be with them. But I never forgot their courage and their faith in the new beginning for Northern Ireland and neither did so many of you, who raised your voices and said, “Enough is enough.”

And so we kept going. And now it looks as though, after all the difficulties, the new day we’ve been talking about for so long is finally at hand.
